Greens And Blues Come Together To Make Aqua

In Splitsville, a town divided by color, the Greens simply don't get along with the Blues and vice versa. MoCo Arts Tweens Musical Theatre will present Flying Colors Sunday, April 13th with shows at 1, 3, and 5 p.m. at the MoCo Arts Black Box Theatre.

"Flying Colors is a wonderful play for elementary school kids to learn about racism and how to confront it," says Marty Hennum, Artistic Director of Theatre at MoCo Arts. "It has fun music, dancing, humor, drama, and an interesting final twist! The actors and the audience will hopefully leave with the message of the importance of treating people the same, even if they have differences."

When the two main characters Molly, a Green and Butch, a Blue, try and unite their small town with a party, chaos ensues and the two young people run away from Splitsville. Their families and friends are then forced to put aside their differences to unite bring them home.

"Everyone should come see Flying Colors because it is funny, and the story is so good that you will think the story is real," says 10-year-old Georgia Gempler, who plays a Green.

"I think people will like Flying Colors because it will connect you to your community," says 11-year-old Ava Lunge, who plays a Green. "The story is funny, dramatic and realistic, it's an insight into how families work and the audience will enjoy seeing how they handle this problem."

Tickets are available at MoCo Arts or by calling 603-357-2100.
