Where the Sidewalk Ends at MoCo Arts

KEENE, NH- MoCo Arts' youngest artists will be featured this weekend in Storytime Theatre's virtual performance of Where the Sidewalk Ends, starting on demand on Sunday, January 24th at 2pm. The show features students ages 4 years through 2nd grade. Based on the poems and illustrations by Shel Silverstein, stories will be acted out, including Boa Constrictor, The Yipiyuk, Early Bird and more! This fun performance is the perfect show for kids of all ages!

Storytime Theatre is a musical theatre class at MoCo Arts designed specifically for young children and includes learning and producing a 45-minute theatrical presentation. The productions are filled with lots of dancing and acting. "Children love to learn this way!" Danielle Fitzpatrick, Artistic Director of Young Arts at MoCo states. "Opportunities to work together, be creative, learn problem solving skills, and build confidence are so important to the growing child. It is so rewarding to inspire children and families alike through the performing arts."

This family-friendly show is produced for kids, by kids, and offers families a fun and affordable way to experience the arts. MoCo Arts will be unable to open the doors to their black box for a live audience this semester, though different, the virtual performance experience is incredibly rewarding! Tickets are $20 per household to rent, and $25 to purchase and download, both On Demand through Vimeo. You can enjoy the show at any time from the comfort of your home. To purchase tickets, visit moco.org/performances.
